

Megan Clendenan – Official Bio!

Megan Clendenan is a freelance writer and children's book author. After studying sociology, English and environmental planning at university, she knew she wanted to pursue a career that combined both her love of research and writing and her desire to make a difference in the world. She has worked for non-profit organizations writing content to persuade and inspire people to donate money to worthy causes including environmental law, women's empowerment, mental health, and urban food security.

As a children's book author, she loves writing non-fiction that explores the connections between history, society, and the environment. She is the author of three middle-grade non-fiction books, including DESIGN LIKE NATURE: BIOMIMICRY FOR A HEALTHY PLANET, which earned a starred review from School Library Journal (2021, Orca Books, co-authored with Kim Ryall Woolcock), FRESH AIR, CLEAN WATER: OUR RIGHT TO A HEALTHY ENVIRONMENT (2022, Orca Books) and CITIES: HOW HUMANS LIVE TOGETHER (2023, Orca Books), and has several upcoming books under contract. She lives near Vancouver, British Columbia, with her family and two fuzzy orange cats. To learn more please visit her at meganclendenan.com or follow her on Twitter @MeganClendenan.
